

ABSTRACT

The invention provides a polishing pad comprising a body having a top surface comprising a first set of grooves with a first depth and first width and a bottom surface comprising a second set of grooves with a second depth and second width, wherein the first set of grooves and second set of grooves are interconnected and are oriented such that they are not aligned.